NBC Tower Update

After 37 years here at NBC Tower, our Assistant Chief Engineer, Micheal Faucher, is retiring. Mike has been with NBC Tower since the doors opened in 1989. We would like to thank Mike for being a key instrument in maintaining the reliability and consistency that has truly helped to keep the building running smoothly. Mike's contributions have been invaluable to our operations, and his presence will be greatly missed.

Please join us in congratulating Mike on a well-earned retirement and thanking him for nearly four decades of exceptional service!

New Visitor Management System

NBC Tower introduced a new Visitor Management system, which launched last month and was designed to make building access easier for everyone!

Tenant Visitor Management teams can now register guests directly through the HQO platform. Once registered, visitors receive a personalized email with arrival details, building information, and a unique QR code for seamless entry. Guests can skip the lobby desk entirely and head straight to the turnstiles by simply scanning their code. For tenant administrators, the new dashboard provides a clear view of all expected visitors throughout the day, making it simple to manage and track arrivals. This enhanced system delivers a more efficient experience for both your teams and your guests.

We appreciate everyone's cooperation and assistance in making this transition smooth and successful!
